Everything Fair in Politics

It is often said by strenuous and zealous partisans, having political objects to gain, that it matters not what means are employed, so that the end is accomplished. Deception, suppression of the truth, bargains and bribery have been tolerated and even justified by men who would scorn the idea of similar action in their private affairs and pursuits. We have known instances even, where active and earnest members of a party, who were not disposed to approve such plans of operation, have been denounced and almost excommunicated, because their party fidelity was not strong enough to make them forget that there was any difference between right and wrong—between integrity and fraud. When such a system is adopted, a party is on the highway to corruption and justly deserved ruin. There is no reason why there should not be as much honesty in politics as in any pursuit which is worthy the attention of men, and as surely as rascality brings infamy and contempt in all other matters, so the crafty politician, who hesitates at no trick or knavery which is likely to win personal or party success, is almost absolutely certain—though for a time he may be called fortunate—to disgrace himself and to lead his followers to defeat.

In the Union party, there is no need of resorting to any device, which is inconsistent with the most unspotted integrity. There is no occasion for any traps to catch votes, or for any of the deceptive schemes which policy has often employed under a pretence of necessity or self defence. Its purposes are distinctive, patriotic and full of the inspiration of liberty. They need not be concealed under unmeaning [illegible] words. [illegible] address to the heart and conscience of every independent citizen. They aim at the salvation of the country in its integrity—at its rescue from privy conspiracy and rebellion, and as a most important means to these ends, at the complete destruction of every agency which has been instrumental in causing the war and all its attendant woe and bloodshed. The Union party now waves the banner of liberty as its conquering sign—desiring no concealment of its grand and heroic intent, it summons to its support all who are inspired by patriotism and liberty and are not afraid to avow and to stand by their sentiments. It despises and will cast aside all those who seek to degrade its high mission, or to make it a temporary highway to political preferment for such as care less about its principles and objects than the rewards which they claim at its hands. Its adherents must be faithful in all things, it thanks no coward, who under the pretence of making it popular, seeks to tone down its loftiest song of freedom, or to weaken its most decided declarations of positive and eternal hostility to the rebellion and every infernal and peculiar institution, which has begotten, fostered and strengthened this atrocious conspiracy against the Government and against human rights. In the politics of such a party, nothing is fair which is not right, and every thing which is right can be safely spoken, for it will be received into good and honest and patriotic hearts, and bring forth fruit abundantly.

THAT ADVERTISEMENT.—For the purpose once for all we say, Gen Wright, Gen Drum, nor no other man ever sent to the Oregon Intelligencer a military order to be published, by authority, or any other way, nor was the order referred to copied into the Intelligencer from the Marysville Express. It was taken from the Sacramento Union and published by us as a matter of news and information, particularly for this locality, as there was an office opened at this place for the enlistment of volunteers, and we thought that the more general was the circulation of the order, the better would the people be informed of what amount of bounty they would receive.

The above, from the Jacksonville Intelligencer, fully exonerates Adjutant General Drum from all the censure which was heaped upon him. We are very glad that there was no just cause for it so far as that paper is concerned, and are also glad that it published the order as it was better and more patriotic reading matter than sometimes fills its columns.

LETTER FROM MAJOR GEN GRANT.—At its late anniversary, the Missionary Society of the Cincinnati Conference, elected General Grant an honorary member. Rev J F Marlay communicated the fact to the General, and the following is his reply:

CHATTANOOGA, Dec 7th 1863

Rev J F Marlay, Secretary, Dear Sir: Through you permit me to express my thanks to the Society of which you are the honored Secretary, for the compliment they have seen fit to pay me by electing me one of its members, accept the election as a token of earnest support by members of the Methodist Missionary Society of the Cincinnati Conference, to the cause of our country in this hour of trial

I have the honor to be very truly, your obedient servant U S GRANT, Major Gen U S A Letter from San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan [illegible] 1864

EDITOR OREGONIAN

When I wrote you before I did not know that I would be here now but being here I send you a few items

THE RUSH COMMENCED

The Pacific leaves to morrow at 10 o'clock loaded with freight and full of passengers and no doubt this will continue to be the case for several months hence. [illegible] well understood all through the State, and [illegible] sands will go overland this spring. [illegible] are the only placer mines of any account on the coast at present and placer mining is the kind to draw a crowd

THE GOLD YIELD EAST OF THE CASCADE MOUNTAINS IN 1863

In an article in the Shippers' Gazette I noticed the yield of all the northern mines for the year 1863 is put at seven to eight million dollars including British Columbia, and including an estimate of the amount brought by private hand. Now, this is simply ridiculous as we all know, and any one might learn by noticing the amounts reported by every steamer for the last year, and by noticing the heavy blankets and leather bags carried out [illegible] by private parties, but such has been and will be our misfortune to be misrepresented by the California press

STEAMERS

The steamer Panama goes up on the 17th in place of the Oregon and the Brother Jonathan goes on the 27th in the place of the Pacific. As I understand it, the Panama is put on temporarily until the Stephens is ready.

WEATHER AND THINGS

Since my last we have had two good steady raining days but the county [illegible] for more and it comes not, on the contrary it is hot and warm. Feed grain and hay in consequence have advanced materially, fearing a drought

WAGON ROAD TO BOISE PERHAPS

Senator Nesmith has introduced a bill in Congress to build a road through the Cascade Mountains, starting at Eugene City and following Middle Fork of Willamette, and asks an appropriation of three sections per mile to build a road from Dalles to a point on Snake River, near the mouth of the Owyhee. This will be of great importance both in a military and local point of view to Oregon should he be successful in getting them through

We are looking daily to hear of the capture of Mobile. It is believed that a combined effort of portions of several armies is to be made or has been made on that point, it is of vastly greater importance than Charleston, and it is greatly to be hoped that the effort may prove successful. That will do. Yours,

WASHINGTON

A DOG MAIL TRAIN.—The following extract from a private letter from Pembina shows how the mail is transported from that point to Crow Wing

I would have written to you four days ago, but the mail had to lay over one trip on account of the lameness of one of the carrier dogs. You will probably think it strange that the great United States mail should be delayed several days for such a cause, but nevertheless it was. The mail is carried from here to Crow Wing, a distance of three hundred and fifty miles, by dog trains, and if one set of dogs get foot sore when their turn comes the mail has to lay over. To morrow they say the dogs will be right, and the mail will go forward. I saw the first dog mail train leave here on last mail day. It consisted of three wolves than dogs. They had regular harness, very fancifully ornamented, and buckskin saddles, gorgeously worked with beads. The dogs are driven in tandem style. They go from forty to fifty miles per day, the half breed driver trotting behind the most of the way.—St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer, Dec 20th

Fifty miles a day is better than the time proposed for the Oregon mail to Sacramento. Would it not be well for our delegation in Congress to see if they cannot have dogs substituted for the slow coach train which the Postoffice Department is disposed to give us.

THE LIBBY PRISON.—REBEL ACCOUNTS OF OUR PRISONERS' LIFE.—The Richmond Whig of the 16th Dec says

The Richmond correspondent of the Atlanta Appeal describes a recent visit to the Hotel de Libby, in this city. He says that he found the passages and the ante-rooms of the prison piled up with boxes and bales of clothing and provisions which had just been received from the North by flag of truce. Upon ascending to the upper stories of the building occupied by the prisoners, he saw the greatest profusion of comforts and luxuries in the way of provant that even a riotous imagination could conceive. Hams, smoked beef, Bologna sausages hung from the rafters, tin cans of potted meat, oysters, sardines, green peas, etc, were arranged on shelving against the walls, while the finest pippins rolled along the floor. Immense packages of new publications, sets of chessmen, backgammon boxes, etc, which had apparently just been opened for distribution, proved that the Yankees, did not intend their unhappy brethren should die of ennui. The prisoners themselves were variously occupied, some lying at full length on the floor, deeply involved in the tragic incidents of Miss Braddon's novels, others playing whist and euchre or deeply pondering the gambits, others asleep, others again eating their dinners. Brigadier General Neal Dow was lapping up the soup furnished by the prison cook with evident satisfaction. One man only was reading the Bible. All looking in fine health and seemed remarkably cheerful. The receipt of boxes from home had no doubt something to do with their good spirits, but before these creature comforts began to arrive they were contented and hearty. Major Turner informed the writer that several of the officers of the highest rank had handed him a statement which they had voluntarily drawn up, for publication in the New York Herald and Tribune, denying in the fullest and strongest manner, the infamous lies about Confederate cruelty which have recently been circulated at the North

PROHIBITIONS.—The San Francisco Bulletin says

There are private letters in town stating that Government had prohibited the distillation of spirits both in Kentucky and Tennessee. The party writing the letter from the West to his correspondent here, says he has high authority for stating that the prohibition would also be extended, at an early day throughout Ohio and Illinois. If this be true then the telegram published by us yesterday in regard to Gen Foster would seem to be in full confirmation of the above. Why this prohibition should be enforced throughout the grain growing districts of the West, is not altogether clear to our understanding as at last accounts from St Louis, corn was worth only about $1 12½ in currency, and though the crop of 1863 was thought to be less than that of 1862, yet the surplus supply was immense

THE DANISH QUESTION.—Recent dispatches in all [illegible] foreign affairs have referred to the trouble in Denmark which have grown up since the death of the late King and the accession to the throne of Christian IX the present [illegible]. As these difficulties wear a serious aspect—threatening the peace of Europe—our readers will be interested in reading the following explanation of their origin, which we take from Harper's Weekly

The question of the Danish succession—or, rather, [illegible] territories for a long time [illegible] with Denmark has suddenly come [illegible] [illegible] all important [illegible] [illegible] but under treating them [illegible] however quite [illegible] the Danish king has [illegible] some generations [illegible] two portions with a [illegible] [illegible] language and affinities [illegible] are Danish proper and [illegible] the German [illegible] of Schleswig and Holstein. The duchies [illegible] belong to the cumbrous organization known as the Germanic Confederation and are represented in the [illegible] [illegible] of the duchies have long [illegible] [illegible] free from their connection with Denmark [illegible] fifteen years ago [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] the female as well as in the male line [illegible] is recognized [illegible] [illegible] in the male line. [illegible] was virtually [illegible] [illegible] 1840 that the heir to the crown who after ward became King Frederick VII [illegible] deceased would leave no heirs upon his death the duchies would be separated from [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Great Britain upon the death of William IV. Victoria [illegible] law [illegible] [illegible] to the British crown and her father's younger brother [illegible] law [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] dismemberment of his kingdom the Danish king, then reigning (Christian VIII, father of the late Frederick VII) [illegible] his death issued an edict establishing a uniform law of succession in all his dominions. Frederick VII, [illegible] after upon the death of his father, succeeded by an unquestioned title to all of his dominions. This took place in 1848, the revolutionary year. The new law of succession, which during the life of Frederick was practically inoperative [illegible] the pretext for an uprising in Holstein. The Germans supported their kinsmen of the duchies moved partly by sympathy of race but likely more by the desire to have possession of Kiel [illegible] port on the Baltic. [illegible] fighting took place and at length England and Russia interfered and undertook to settle the question of the Danish succession. The king [illegible] ing of issue the family next in succession was that of Augustenburg. They were of German stock and nearly all of them had opposed the union of the duchies with Denmark. They were therefore unpopular in Denmark while greatly in favor in Holstein. There was however a younger cousin, named Christian, whose poverty and perhaps his inclination had kept him apart from politics. He and his heirs were [illegible] upon as successors to the Danish crown, the head of the family the Duke of Augustenburg, formally resigning his claims in consideration of the payment of a couple of millions of dollars. This arrangement took the form of a treaty formally sanctioned by all the Great Powers of Europe and at length confirmed by the Danish Parliament. It seems however that the duchies were not represented in this Parliament, that the German Confederation, as such, was not consulted, though Austria and Prussia its principal members guaranteed the treaty, and that there were some provisions made in favor of the duchies. Yet notwithstanding these possible drawbacks Prince Christian was generally recognized as heir presumptive of the Danish crown, and though as yet only a quiet country gentleman of limited means and with a large household to support he and his were adopted into the royal families. So when the Prince of Wales was willing to finish sowing his wild oats and take a wife, a daughter of Christian was considered quite eligible for the place, and when the Greeks, having expelled their Bavarian monarch wanted a king, and having vainly tried to obtain one royal youngster after another, fixed upon a son of the heir-presumptive to the Danish crown, their choice was ratified by the monarchs of Europe. The Prince, moreover, had several other sons and daughters of marriageable or wifes to European princes and princesses, whose choice was sadly limited, unless they dared follow the example of Louis Napoleon, and marry whom they pleased. This apparent blessing of a large and promising family proved a trouble to the Prince of Denmark when he became king upon the death of his predecessor, at the middle of last November. The people of the duchies saw that there was no reasonable prospect of a failure of the direct male line, which would set them free from Denmark. No sooner was Christian IX, proclaimed King of Denmark than Prince Frederick, the heir of the elder branch of the House of Augustenburg put in his claims as Duke of Holstein which the people at once acknowledged. Several of the minor German princes have recognized these claims. The new Danish king has been making preparations to enforce his authority in the duchies, they are preparing to resist, expecting to be supported by the German Confederation. There is no dispute as to the right of Christian IX in Denmark proper. The question is as to the duchies. England has formally asserted that his right there is perfect. Austria declares that it depended upon certain conditions which have not been executed, the nonfulfilment of which may invalidate his claim. The Prussian Government remains, as usual, non-committal to the last possible moment. If said the Prussian Minister, Denmark had carried out the provisions of the treaty, much as we may regret that we entered into it we must have recognized the sovereignty of Christian IX over Holstein but as these provisions have not been carried out, the Government of Prussia is free to decide whether it shall consider itself absolved from the London Treaty. In the mean while the people of Prussia, as represented in the Chamber of Deputies, seem to have no doubt on the question. On the 18th of December by a vote of 231 to 63 it was declared that "the honor and interests of Germany demand that all the Germanic States should support the rights of the hereditary Prince Frederick to the duchies of Schleswig and Holstein." Next after the question of Russia and Poland that of Denmark and Holstein was the most important one proposed for discussion in the Congress to which the French Emperor invited the European Sovereigns

SENSIBLE AND PATRIOTIC.—The Marysville Appeal, in stating its objections to a bill pending in the Legislature, makes the following judicious remarks, which "express our mind exactly"

We oppose this bill purely on principle and a careful regard to the prosperity of the party. We believe we see in it the germ of a political clique, which when once inaugurated and in full sway in this State will as surely swamp and defeat the Union party as it exists. It is the clique not men, which we oppose. When we expose [illegible] we make no war upon any individual within it nor favor any individual outside of it. But we are opposed to all political inquisition. We have an horror of political cliques, [illegible]. We fear all political Regencies. They are institutions conducted on [illegible] and mercenary principles, and have but one [illegible] [illegible] and Revenge. So long as this paper is under its present control and [illegible] it will be maintained toward all men who would gain office and political power through the aid of a Regency. It will be an honest and [illegible] [illegible] humanity will permit always maintaining a decent independence and under no circumstances [illegible] any faction. If we add a [illegible] to the defeat of the [illegible] position to it we are not consoled by the result in defeating the wishes of the friends of Governor Low but in [illegible] and considerations [illegible] that we contributed something [illegible] of the party and the Union cause. The press is a powerful influence and speaks with a thousand tongues in the [illegible] of honest and upright men it bears a sway and influence for the common good—counts as well as [illegible]. But under the control of aspiring [illegible] intriguing politicians it becomes a curse to both

THE PRESIDENCY.—The Shasta Courier, in expressing a choice for the Presidency prefers first Abraham Lincoln. If we cannot get Old Abe says the Courier then we would like above all things to see General Benjamin F Butler—by rebels and their sympathizers called the "Beast"—receive the nomination. We concur—because the Beast is the most the rebels and copperheads despise above all other beasts, except Lincoln.—Appeal.

MARYSVILLE, CAL, Feb [illegible].—The newly elected judge of the supreme Court of this State in the [illegible] [illegible] decided that the law [illegible] of the California Legislature which [illegible] [illegible] that soldiers who are citizens of the State [illegible] the County and State elections [illegible] constitutional. The case was brought on [illegible] from [illegible] county and the issue raised [illegible] construction of the words "[illegible]" in the [illegible] 1st of the Constitution [illegible] [illegible] a citizen [illegible] [illegible] the State six months [illegible] the county or district [illegible] [illegible] shall be entitled to [illegible] elections. The Court held that they [illegible] [illegible] means the actual offering of a ballot [illegible] polls, and that the voter must have resided in the State next preceding the election, in the county or district wherein he has to reside. The Court decided that the Legislature had the right to pass a law authorizing soldiers to vote [illegible] that such power could not [illegible] and cannot be so done [illegible] was given by Judge Shafter and concurred in by a full bench. In its effect it decides the right of office in favor of democrats in Tuolumne and other counties as well as the right to seats in [illegible] branches of the Legislature, where they depend on the soldiers' votes.

A dispatch from Santa Clara county announces the death of Col James Kennedy sheriff of that county, and Republican nominee for Governor in 1859.

Memorials to the Legislature against the repeal of the specific contract law are being circulated over the State and extensively signed. Over 6000 signatures have been obtained in San Francisco

A BEAUTIFUL SUBJECT FOR A NATIONAL ANTHEM.—The editor of the Louisville Journal has received a communication from Captain GEORGE RILEY, of the Tenth Kentucky Infantry, depicting in a beautiful language a most touching and impressive incident in the storming of Missionary Ridge. The writer furnishes a grand and sublime subject for a national anthem

The summit of Missionary Ridge is one thousand feet above the level of the Tennessee River and towers aloft in grandeur, a fitting monument to commemorate the great victory achieved by our national arms on the memorable 25th of November. On that day the Star Spangled Banner could be discerned slowly scaling the steep and rugged ascent riveting the gaze of thousands of anxious spectators in line of battle in the valley below

It seems that the Eighty sixth and Eighty seventh Indiana and the Eleventh Ohio had failed to receive the order to halt, when it was given to the line of battle. Onward they moved, as it were, to the very jaws of death. The terrible suspense of their brave comrades was only equaled by that of the great Napoleon when he stood on the summit of a ridge at Waterloo, gazing, between hope and despair, at the last grand charge of his old guard, until they were lost to sight in the clouds of smoke from the enemy's cannon. Step by step they ascended until within [illegible] the Rebel rifles, when they received the order to lay down. The Rebels opened upon them, and volley after volley was poured into their ranks, amidst the wild and enthusiastic shouts of the Rebels and the defiant waving of the stars and bars—said to have been done by Bragg in person. Springing to their feet with the energy of desperation, the glorious Eighty-sixth Indiana leads the grand charge to victory or death, followed by the Eighty-seventh and the Eleventh Ohio, and onward they pushed their columns through a shower of bullets that rattled like hail, and were lost to view in the smoke of battle

A deathly stillness pervaded the line of battle below for a few moments, when the anxious inquiry passed along our line, "Is our flag still there?" It seemed like hoping against hope to expect that the three regiments had met any other fate than instant annihilation. Every minute seemed a month for half an hour, at the end of which time the smoke disappeared, and our glorious flag greeted the anxious spectators floating in triumph over the Rebel works. It was the war worn banner of the immortal Eighty sixth Indiana, which was held until reinforcements came up and secured the position gained by the most daring and terrible charge that ever history recorded

The flag of the Eighty sixth Indiana, that sealed this victory, received on its folds eighty six shots, emblematic of the regiment it so gallantly led through the ranks of death to a crowning victory. The staff was broken by a ball, but it still waves over one of the most gallant regiments that ever entered the field of battle. The answer on that memorable night to ten thousand inquiries infused a new spirit in the army, as it resounded along the line "Yes our flag is still there!" Forty thousand spectators who witnessed the thrilling scene and asked the question while held in fearful suspense will ask it as often as returning memory brings to mind the grand charge of the gallant regiments on Missionary Ridge.

NOT PROSECUTED.—Several months ago the bark Ann Parry came into port from Puget Sound, bringing a sailor named John Murray in irons. It was alleged that while at anchor in a harbor on the Sound, Murray and the mate of the vessel engaged in a fight, during which M threw his antagonist over the side of the ship, who, falling on a small boat alongside, was instantly killed. On his arrival here he was taken before United States Commissioner Hyde who held him to answer. The Grand Jury presented him on a charge of manslaughter and yesterday the case came up in the United States Circuit Court for trial. As soon as Judge Hoffman learned the facts, he instructed the Prosecuting Attorney to enter his nolle, as the Court had no jurisdiction over the matter. He also lectured in a pretty severe manner, the Captain of the vessel who, instead of handing the prisoner over to the authorities of Washington Territory as he should have done, brought him to California, where he could not be punished.—Call.

GENERAL GRANT AND THE PRESIDENCY.—A gentleman in this city has received a letter from General Grant in which he alludes to the use which is daily being made of his name in connection with the Presidency. He says scarcely a day passes that he does not receive letters from prominent politicians, naming him as their candidate. Thus far, he says, he has replied to none of them, and what is more he does not intend to. When the rebellion is suppressed and our country saved, says the gallant soldier, it will be time enough to talk upon that subject.—Wash. Cor Philadelphia Inquirer

THE CHANGING SENTIMENT.—The fact that public sentiment in England is fast changing in favor of the North, has recently been exemplified in a remarkable manner. There has been several elections for members of Parliament lately, in various parts of the kingdom and in every instance the rival candidates have gone before the people solely on the American question, no matter what were the local interests at stake. All candidates have been compelled to declare their views and sentiments in advance on this subject, and to pledge themselves as to their course if elected. It is gratifying to learn that in every case the man who avowed himself a friend of the North was elected. It is a fact that speaks volumes on the true sentiments of the English people towards this country. The aristocracy may sympathize with the South, but the great mass of Englishmen are friends of the North. Henry Ward Beecher, during his short stay in England, has done a good deal to help this feeling along, and now it is once fairly started it will keep moving. There is no longer a chance for a quarrel between mother and daughter. Blood is thicker than water, though appearances in our relations with England have sometimes seemed to falsify the old adage

It has been thought that people are degenerating, because they do not live as long as in the days of Methuselah. But the fact is, says the Bangor Whig, provisions are so high, nobody can afford to live very long at current prices.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.—To-morrow is St. Valentine's Day, held in honor and universally esteemed throughout christendom as the fittest period for bashful young lovers to make known the flame which warms their susceptible hearts. If young people who observe it would follow out the custom as the cavaliers and ladies of the middle ages did, it would increase very much the interest and significance of the day. In those good old times the gentleman who asked a lady to be his Valentine for the succeeding year, signed his name in full, and in good plain Saxon, or French, or whatever else it happened to be, declared his purpose and asked a reciprocation of affection. It is true that the page or squire who bore the mission was in danger of having his head broken by the seneschal of some old bucks who claimed the name of father; but then, the zest of the affair was heightened by the dangers to be overcome. In the pace of this time honored custom we observe the popular predilection is for outrageous caricatures upon the parties to whom they are sent. It is to be hoped that method of keeping Valentine's Day will be "more honored in the breech than the observance" this year.

DEPARTURE OF THE STEAMER.—The steamer Pacific, A. M. Burns, Commander, left this port at 6½ o'clock P. M., yesterday, bound for San Francisco, via Victoria. She had a large amount of freight for the latter place, and in consequence did not take all that awaited shipment here—some 6,000 boxes of apples, and a few tons of other freight, constitute the amount taken from Portland. She carried away the sum of $80,000 in treasure, Wells, Fargo & Co. being the principal shippers. In addition she also conveyed about 100 passengers.

THEATRICAL.—The attendance at the Theatre last night was not so crowded as the night before, yet it was very well. The varied and interesting bill offered, and considering that Mrs. Hayne personated two characters ought to have been inducement enough to fill the house. The performers fully sustained their previous good name, and were well received.

RIOTOUS CONDUCT.—Complaint was made before Recorder McCoy yesterday, and a warrant issued, for the arrest of J. C. Hess, for riotous conduct. He managed to dodge the officer, however, on horseback, but before doing so inflicted a wound upon the head of a third party by several blows with the butt of a revolver.

CIRCUIT COURT.—In the case of the State v. O. A. Noble the jury returned a verdict of assault; judgment was entered for $25 and ... of prosecution. Wm. R. Hill was acquitted. Motions, etc., occupied the balance of the time yesterday.

RECORDER'S COURT.—Dennis Raglin was arraigned for being drunk and disorderly; he was fined $5 and costs, which was paid, and went on his way rejoicing. Other parties were arrested, but the complainants not appearing against them were discharged.

THE Bannock Gold and Silver Mining Company, formed by some of the most prominent gentlemen of the O. S. N. Co., in this city, have bought large interests in the Landon, and other ledges, and design putting extensive machinery in operation at an early day.

STEAMSHIPS.—Our San Francisco letter speaks of the Panama taking the place of the Oregon temporarily, until the completion of the Stephens.

THE Library Association will meet at the United States District Court room on Monday evening, for the purpose of arranging a permanent organization.

THE Grand Jury returned several indictments yesterday for minor offences.

RIVER ITEMS.—The Willamette has continued to recede until at present it is very little above the usual summer mark. The current is generally strong enough near the O. S. N. Company's wharf, to readily "swing" a steamer around, when starting down stream, but of late the Hunt has been turned bow down at evening, to save time in starting.

Two rafts of lumber were recently floated into the city from the Clackamas. They took Mississippian, on a small scale, and undoubtedly they are the forerunner of coming events, as the demand for lumber increases we look for a corresponding increase in the number of such crafts.

The Wilson G. Hunt had an unusual load of freight and passengers yesterday, carrying over 100 tons of the former, and 200 persons. For so early in the season that must be considered an extraordinary load.

The Senator brought her usual list of freight and passengers yesterday. Running in the service of the Overland Mail Contractors she will make the trip to Oregon City and back to-morrow.

The steamer Vancouver was tied up again yesterday, and the Express put in her place for one trip. The loading consisted of stores principally, for the Government.

Oswego furnishes a portion of our lumber. A large scow, loaded from there, was discharging on the levee at the foot of Salmon street, yesterday.

The Julia started upon her third trip to the Cascades, as a stock boat, yesterday. She carried away a large number of horses and cattle.

The John H. Couch left for Astoria yesterday—she is expected to return this evening with the bark Samuel Merrit in tow.

The Cowlitz leaves this morning for Monticello.

The Rival leaves for Oregon City at 2 o'clock to-day.

FIRE DRILLS.—Multnomah No. 2, and Columbia No. 3, meet for drill this evening.

O. S. N. Co.'s AGENT AT CELILO.—T. J. Peabody, for eleven years a faithful clerk of Wells, Fargo & Co. at Sacramento, lately resigned his position there; he came here by the last steamer, and goes up the Columbia this morning on his way to Celilo, where he will have charge of the business of the O. S. N. Co. at that point. We feel sure that he will fully meet the expectations of his friends in his new position, and we hope he won't mind the little sand which occasionally, now and then, "moves" up there. R. H. Mallory, who has been agent at Celilo, we understand will go to Umatilla in the same capacity.

THE COMING ANNIVERSARY.—The people of Belmssi are making preparations for a fine celebration on the coming anniversary of the birth of Washington. A correspondent says, —"it is likely to be a complete success, and is for the purpose of raising money for the Sanitary fund." Rev. T. H. Pearne and Judge Williams are to address the people. Both vocal and instrumental music are to enliven the occasion. The Washington Literary Society have the management of the proceedings.

AUCTION!—The Auction Sales of A. B. Richardson, for to-day comprise a large lot of furniture, and an assortment of staple goods.

TAXES were paid in to the office of the Collector pretty freely, yesterday.

A KING OR EMPEROR FOR THE UNITED STATES.—We heard this subject discussed a few evenings since, some favoring and others opposed, as all good Americans ought to be; but all agreed that Houston, Hastings & Co., of Montgomery street, corner of Sutter, San Francisco, were the Kings and Emperors in their line, for no firm ever yet started in California can possibly vie with them.

MARKET REPORT AND REVIEW.

FRIDAY, February 12th.

The business of the week now about to close, has in the aggregate been comparatively light, so far as sales from first hands are concerned. Jobbers have done considerable with the interior, however, and everything betokens a healthy trade.

The business of transporting produce by the river steamers is still on the increase, and the amounts on storage is daily augmented, by receipts from such sources. The Pacific is now loading, and nearly ready to sail for San Francisco with a cargo that will not materially diminish the supply.

Trade with the interior is unobstructed. During the past week the O. S. N. Company have placed an extra line of steamers in operation between this city and the Upper Columbia, for the exclusive purposes of carrying stock.

The growing interest in the affairs of the Northern Mines, in California, is very perceptible and the increased traffic and emigration drawn hither, is considerable.

Cattle, in anything like good condition are said to be very scarce East of the Mountains, and stock owners are being well paid by the transaction of shipping them by steamboat for the trade.

Horses are scarce, and sales are noted at round figures.

Grain markets are firm, without material change in prices.

Some slight changes have been observed in hams and Bacon, but the ruling figures remain the same.

A scarcity of poultry and eggs have been the occasion of a rise in prices. The market is governed at present by our wholesale quotations.

Sugars remain unchanged, with the exception of a slight alteration in No. 1 China. We quote crushed in barrels at 20 c.

Syrups have advanced.

Sleeping on Post.

I am lonely—I am lonely! This rest is even as death!
Let me hear again the ringing spears, and the battle-trumpet's breath;
Let me see the fiery charger foam, and the royal banner wave—
But where art thou, my brother? where?—in thy low and early grave.
—Mrs. Hemans.

The picket-fire was fighting a tough battle with the rain. The flames rolled and receded alternately in the fast descending torrent. Luckily there was a strong wind, which prevented the fire from being quenched. It was, of course, a very uncomfortable night, but I noticed that although the rain had saturated our garments through and through, it had not affected the spirits of my companions, which were still in as good order as the powder in their cartridge-boxes. Presently, however, our party received an addition in the person of a young soldier, whose behavior was an exception to that of the merry, boisterous fellows who surrounded him. He was not a "Red-leg." His uniform betokened a member of the —d regiment. His face was pale almost to ghastliness, his eyes hollow and wild his lips tremulous and flanked with lines of deep suffering. From under his blue cap a mass of coal-black hair fell, waving wildly in the rain and wind. He seated himself upon the ground with his knees drawn up to his chin, and his thin hands resting upon them with the palms turned to the fire. The melancholy of the new comer—the expression of the still deep anguish that rested upon every feature—the cavern-like eyes burning in the firelight, and the lips so mute yet full of sad expression, seemed to throw a sudden gloom upon the hearts of my companions. Their mirth slackened perceptibly—the laugh died away gradually, and grave subjects rose for discussion. Still the young soldier spoke not. Straight into the fire he gazed, and the flames seemed to grow dim beneath his steady glance.

Presently our sergeant of the guard made his appearance.

"Boys," said he, as he seated himself by the fire, "should you believe it? I found Bill asleep upon his post."

"What! asleep a night like this?"

"It's a fact," replied the sergeant.

"It's a bad habit, this sleeping on post," remarked one of the party.

"You are right," observed the member of the —d regiment, looking up and speaking for the first time. "You are right. Oh, my God! my God!"

He spoke in a deep, hollow voice—a voice of heart-rendering anguish.

My companions stared upon the young man in surprise.

"Who is that?" inquired one of them, in a low voice, of the sergeant.

The latter took a slip of paper from his pocket, upon which were written the names of the men composing the guard. Having examined it a moment, he replied:

"It is Harold Stain, of —d regiment."

He slipped the paper into his pocket. The hollow voice had again broken forth.

"Comrades, I have a story to tell," it said —"a story which I hope you will never forget. It is a sad, a fearful chapter in my own experience, which I trust may serve as a warning to those, if there be any such among you, who are in the habit of sleeping at the post of duty."

He paused a moment, and then perceiving our curiosity was excited continued:

That which I am about to relate must be told in a few words, for I cannot bear to linger upon the story. Know, then, that after I had been a member of —d regiment for a few months, I acquired a habit of carelessness when stationed at any post as a sentinel. From my earliest years I had been subject to fits of musing, which at times made me oblivious to all that was going on around me. This habit clung to me even when, prompted by a spirit of real patriotism, I joined the ranks that were forming to take part in our glorious cause.

At first, feeling the responsibility of my position, and the necessity for care and vigilance at the post of duty, I wrestled determinedly with my unreasonable reveries, which otherwise would have thrown me into a listless mood, and finally have steeped my senses in slumber as they had often done before.

But after a while, as I became more accustomed to the life of a soldier, I grew careless, and gave up my mind to the old habit of musing, so that a great portion of my nightly guard duty was passed in the world of dreams.

In the same company to which I belonged was my brother Ralph. We had left our widowed mother and enlisted at the same time. Our natures were different as lightning and fog. He was active, vigilant, full of life and spirit—a perfect soldier. I was slow, dull and thoughtful—a listless dreamer. But we loved each other all the more for our dissimilarity of character. We shared the same tent, the same blanket, messed together. Hardship and danger strengthened our affection. But my brother frequently reproved me for sleeping at my post, and earnestly requested me to break myself of the habit. He knew my failing, for he had heard my comrades speak of it. He urged the duty of a soldier —the sacred duty which every man owed his country—and the consequences to me if my fault should be detected by the officers of the regiment. I would then promise to do better, but next period of guard duty would find me as careless as ever, and still indulging my unfortunate propensity.

It happened about this time that my brother was promoted to the rank of third sergeant, in which capacity he frequently had charge of the guard.

On the evening of the day which preceded the battle of Malvern Hill, our company was detailed for picket. When it was my turn to go on post, my brother took me aside, and urged the necessity of my being particularly vigilant in that occupation, as a large force of the enemy was believed to be in our vicinity. I promised compliance, and the next moment the corporal marched us to our respective stations. My post was near a large pine, fronting a deep thicket about a hundred yards from the spot where I stood.

The moon was shining brightly, and with my musket over my shoulder, I walked to and fro, enjoying the beauty of the night and at the same time keeping a good watch. At length, however, not hearing or seeing anything to excite my suspicions, I leaned against the pine and fell into my old habits of musing. Presently a drowsy feeling stole over me, and my eyes closed involuntarily. I was sinking into a dreamy doze, when a heavy hand upon my shoulder, caused me to start and open my eyes.

I turned and beheld my brother, the sergeant of the guard, standing before me.

"Harold," he said, in a tone of mingled grief and anger, "this won't do. I know that you feel tired and worn out, after our long march. So do I—in fact, we all feel the same way; but we have contrived to keep awake, and you must do the same."

"You are right, Ralph," I answered, "and you shall have no reason to complain of me again."

I spoke decidedly. My brother looked at me steadily for a moment and then withdrew.

Carrying my musket at a shoulder, I now walked rapidly upon my "beat," with the determination to keep awake. But as hour after hour passed away, and I was not relieved, I grew vexed and impatient. It was evident my brother was keeping me on post over my time, to punish me for having fallen asleep. These feelings weakened my determination to obey his injunctions, and ere I was hardly aware of the fact, I was again leaning against the pine, with closed eyes. Unconsciousness was fast stealing upon my brain, when a quick rustling noise in a clump of shrubbery upon my right startled me into wakefulness. I raised my head, and beheld a tall figure, wearing a gray coat and a slouched hat, advancing toward me.

Quick as lightning I leveled my piece and fired. The report of my rifle rang sharply upon the air, and the figure fell to the earth with a deep groan. Exulting in the idea that I had thus foiled an enemy, I now shouted aloud for the corporal of the guard. But at that moment the yell as of a thousand demons suddenly arose from the thicket in my front, followed by the crash of a heavy volley of musketry which sent the bullets whizzing around me as thick as hail stones. The next instant a large body of rebels came pouring from the woods like a torrent. Retreating from tree to tree I loaded and fired again. But the voice of our captain now fell upon my ear, ordering us to fall back upon the regiment.

One-third of the company succeeded in reaching camp, the rest had fallen into the hands of the rebels. I looked for my brother, but did not see him. One of the men, a corporal, stepped to my side and whispered,

"Where is Ralph?"

"I know not," I replied, anxiously. "I fear he has been taken prisoner."

"What! How is this? Did you not see him when he played you that trick?" inquired the corporal.

"I don't understand you," said I.

The corporal looked surprised.

"I don't know what to make of this," he said.

"Explain yourself, for God's sake," I exclaimed, with a strange feeling of uneasiness, "tell me what you mean."

"Well," said the corporal, "a few moments before we were surprised by the rebels, your brother came to me and whispered, 'Harold has fallen asleep again. Now I am going to play him a trick, which I trust, will cure him of this habit. You have in your knapsack an old gray coat and slouched hat which I will put on, so as to give myself the appearance of a rebel. Then I will steal upon him, take possession of his musket, throw him to the ground, and with my knee upon his breast, point my pistol at his head, and in a disguised voice command him to keep quiet, or I will blow out his brains. After I have frightened him sufficiently, I will reveal myself. I trust he will not soon forget the lesson, and when he perceives how easily he could have been surprised by an enemy it will cure him.'"

The corporal would have said more, had he not been interrupted by the wild exclamation which broke from my lips, for I now knew that the figure I had mistaken for a rebel—the figure in the gray coat and slouched hat upon which I had fired, was my own brother.

Almost frenzied with anguish, I told the story to the corporal, who listened aghast with horror and astonishment.

"My God!" he exclaimed, "it is fearful! You have killed your own brother!"

At that moment the order came for the regiment to pack knapsacks and march. Almost bereft of my reason, I moved about mechanically among my comrades, hearing nothing that was said to me and seeing nothing except the vision of my brother's corpse lying upon the edge of that gloomy thicket where he had fallen.

The next day our regiment was engaged at the battle of Malvern Hill, and as the missiles of death flew around me, I silently prayed that Heaven might end my miserable existence then and there. But alas! my life was spared, while the blood of those who loved the world for its pleasures, and whose spirits were careless and full of happy buoyancy, drenched the earth in streams.

"My brother! oh God! my brother!"

The young man paused and buried his haggard face upon his knees. His revelation affected us deeply, and we exerted ourselves to soothe his wild grief. I felt interested in him, and having succeeded at length in drawing him into conversation, resolved that our acquaintance should not end at the picket fire. Accordingly I visited him at his camp a few days afterward.

But I found him in a frame of mind which seemed to threaten his reason. His eyes gleamed with a wild light, and he spoke strangely—almost incoherently. Suddenly a voice was heard outside of the tent in which we were seated:

"Harold! Harold! Come here!"

He started up and rushed out into the company street. I rose and followed him. A tall young man advanced to meet Harold.

It was a moving and thrilling spectacle. Explanations followed. Harold's shot had passed through his brother's side in a glancing direction inflicting a severe but not a mortal wound. His gray coat and slouched hat caused the rebels to mistake him for one of their own men. Accordingly they lifted him from the earth and conveyed him to an ambulance. He was carried to Richmond, where good medical treatment was afforded him. It was not until the fifth day after he received his wound that he was discovered to be a Federal instead of a rebel soldier. He was then placed in quarters which were not quite so comfortable as those he had previously enjoyed. A good constitution, however, triumphed over every hardship, and his wound healed rapidly. Subsequently, he was transferred to the prisoner's quarters, where he remained until he was exchanged, when he hastened to rejoin his regiment.

I have only to add that from the moment of this meeting with his brother, Harold was an altered man. Happiness danced in his eye, filled out his hollow cheek, and inspired his whole being with a degree of spirit and vivacity it had never felt before.

BUCHTEL & CARDWELL'S

PICTURES ARE THE BEST IN OREGON

HELMBOLD'S Genuine Preparation.

HIGHLY CONCENTRATE Compound Fluid

EXTRACT BUCHU,

A POSITIVE AND SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR DISEASES OF THE

BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL

AND

DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of DIGESTION and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY or CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as PAIN and INFLAMMATION, and is good for MEN, WOMEN OR CHILDREN.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

For Weakness arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion or Abuse,

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the	Muscular System,
Hot Hands,	Flushing of the Body,
Dryness of the Skin,	Eruptions on the Face,
Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms if allowed to go, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follows

Impotency, Fatuity, Epileptic Fits,

IN ONE OF WHICH THE PATIENT MAY EXPIRE.

Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

"INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,"

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, BUT NONE WILL CONFESS.

THE RECORDS OF THE INSANE ASYLUMS,

And the melancholy deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion that

THE CONSTITUTION,

once affected by Organic Weakness,

Requires the Aid of Medicine, to strengthen and invigorate the system, which invariably does.

A Trial will Convince the most Skeptical.

FEMALES! FEMALES! FEMALES!

OLD OR YOUNG,

Single, Married or contemplating Marriage

IN MANY AFFECTIONS PECULIAR TO FEMALES, the Extract of Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the Sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the DECLINE OR CHANGE OF LIFE!

No Family should be without it.

TAKE NO MORE BALSAM, MERCURY, OR UNPLEASANT MEDICINE FOR UNPLEASANT AND DANGEROUS DISEASES.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

HELMBOLD'S IMPROVED ROSE WASH

CURES SECRET DISEASES,

In all their Stages; At Little Expense;
Little or no Change in Diet; No inconvenience;
AND NO EXPOSURE.

It causes a frequent desire and gives strength to Urinate, thereby Removing Obstructions, preventing and curing Strictures of the Urethra, allaying Pain and Inflammation, so frequent in the class of Diseases, and expelling all Poisonous, diseased and worn out matter.

THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS

Who have been the victims of Quacks

and who have paid heavy fees to be cured in a short time, have found they were deceived, and that the "POISON" has, by the use of "Powerful Astringents," been dried up in the system, to break out in a more aggravated form, and perhaps after marriage.

Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu

For all Affections and Diseases of the URINARY ORGANS, whether existing in MALE OR FEMALE, from whatever cause originating, and

NO MATTER OF HOW LONG STANDING.

Diseases of these Organs require the aid of a Diuretic.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

IS THE GREAT DIURETIC,

And it is certain to have the desired effect in Diseases for which it is recommended.

Evidence of the most Responsible and reliable character will accompany the medicines.

PHILADELPHIA, [illegible] 23, 1862.

Messrs. Jones & Evans.—Well, [illegible] land's German Bitters has saved my [illegible] take in this. It is vouched for by [illegible] rades, some of whose names are app[illegible] fully cognizant of all the circumstances [illegible] and have been for the last four years, a member of Sherman's celebrated battery, and under the immediate command of Captain R. B. Ayres. Through the exposure attendant upon my arduous duties, I was attacked in November last with inflammation of the lungs, and was for seventy two days in the hospital. This was followed by great debility, heightened by an attack of dysentery. I was then removed from the White House, and sent to the city on board the steamer State of Maine, from which I landed on the 28th of June. Since that time I have been about as low as one could be and still retain a spark of vitality. For a week or more I was scarcely able to swallow anything, and if I did force a morsel down, it was immediately thrown up again.

I could not even keep a glass of water on my stomach. Life could not last under these circumstances; and accordingly, the physicians who had been working faithfully, though unsuccessfully, to rescue me from the grasp of the dread Archer, frankly told me they could do no more for me, and advised me to see a clergyman, and to make such disposition of my limited funds as best suited me. An acquaintance who visited me at the hospital, Mr. Frederick Steinbron, of Sixth below Arch Street, advised me, as a forlorn hope, to try your Bitters, and kindly procured a bottle. From the time I commenced taking them the gloomy shadow of death receded, and I am now, thank God for it, getting better. Though I have taken but two bottles, I have gained ten pounds, and I feel sanguine of being permitted to rejoin my wife and daughter, from whom I have heard nothing for eighteen months; for, gentlemen, I am a loyal Virginian, from the vicinity of Front Royal. To your invaluable Bitters I owe the certainty of life which has taken the place of vague fears—to your Bitters will I owe the glorious privilege of again clasping to my bosom those who are dearest to me in life.

Very truly yours, ISAAC MALONE.

We fully concur in the truth of the above statement, as we had despaired of seeing our comrade, Mr. Malone, restored to life.
